TROUBLE BREWS OVER STRIKE AT N.S. STEEL MINES

Glens Bay, N.S.—Three office employees of the British Empire Steel Corporation were injured when officials who had been demanding more work at the New Waterford power station were forcibly removed from the station by 200 striking miners.

As a result of consequent stoppage of work at the plant, the mines in Glens Bay and New Waterford districts are now flooding, and the town of New Waterford lacks light and water.

J. E. McLaugh, vice-president of the corporation, wired President Armstrong for police protection for officials working on maintenance shifts.

An exchange of fire between the strikers and the officials resulted in the death of three men, including the strikers' leader, W. J. O'Brien, and the officials' general manager, W. J. O'Brien. It is the mine workers' contention that the officials' actions were justified.

Minister President McLaugh sent a telegram to Hon. James Mackenzie, minister of labor, asking him to inquire into and put down the strike.

Pooling Cattle Would Not Influence Market

Unless Flow of Livestock Could Be Regulated

Calgary—Considerable information has been given by stockmen and others to the Saskatchewan livestock commission, which is in Calgary studying the co-operative marketing of cattle.

The commission is composed of Geo. Langley, chairman; Edwin Evans, manager of the Moose Jaw stock yards; R. A. Wright, Edw. Evans, Sask.; and W. Waldron, of the Saskatchewan department of agriculture.

Much of the information given to the commission was to the effect that the market costs were reduced by a pool, it naturally would be to the advantage of the producer. However, the opinion was expressed that the mere fact of pooling cattle would not influence the general market price of livestock, but it was admitted that it would be possible to influence the price of the livestock to market a pool have a beneficial effect.

Old Military Ceremonial Celebrated In London

"Trooping the Colors" or King's Birthday Reaffirms Allegiance London—King George celebrated his sixtieth birthday. The court came to London in Windsor for the occasion, which was marked by the customary congratulations from relatives, friends and foreign monarchs, and a large military review.

The chief public celebration in London centered around the old military ceremonial, "Trooping the Colors," the annual parade and evolutions by the Brigade of Guards in St. James' Park.

The yearly military pageant of trooping the colors has no counterpart in any other army in the world, and it is only conducted in the United Kingdom by the Brigade of Guards of their allegiance to the sovereign and their privilege of mounting guards in special places and on special occasions of particular ceremony.

At the trooping of the colors the mounted officers of the Household Cavalry and the Life Guards appeared in full uniform, and the King, King George IV, and also with the bugle which sounded their charge in the band of the Household Cavalry.

BRITAIN KEEPING CLOSE WATCH ON AFGHANISTAN

London—As a result of alleged Soviet attempts in 1918 and 1919 to penetrate India, through the valuable northwestern frontier, the British Government has been especially watchful of Afghanistan affairs. It has also maintained a strong defence at the frontier ports, since German attempts to enter India from Afghanistan and the northwest during the war.

The British Government has a treaty with the Emir of Afghanistan, in which the Emir promises not to allow Soviet agitators to enter towns within certain distances from the Indian frontier.

It is pointed out in London that an Afghan rebellion, instigated by foreign influence, could readily become a religious war and that would menace the greater part of India's population.

British observers have reported there is little possibility of any direct attack on India by the Soviet Union against the British force, but it is considered likely that the Emir will have to allocate unless he is able to control his subjects.

SECURITY PACT SOLUTION NOW LOOMS IN SIGHT

Paris—The French reply to British observations regarding the proposed French note to Germany, answering the latter's suggestion for a Western European security pact, has been sent to London.

It was said in official circles that the matter is considerably nearer a solution. The French have tried to meet some of the British objections and believe an agreement is in prospect. After a cabinet meeting, at which the note was discussed, Foreign Minister Briand said France and Great Britain were agreed in principle, but that a number of details remain to be settled. He expressed the belief that an agreement will be reached and the note sent to Germany soon after the meeting of the League of Nations, which commences at Geneva this week.

The previously expressed British attitude regarding Germany's security pact proposal, is that the pact should be confined to Western European frontiers. France has desired Eastern European frontiers to be taken into consideration.

Foreign Minister Briand plans to take the opportunity during his attendance at the League of Nations' council, in Geneva, to discuss with the British foreign secretary, Austen Chamberlain, the Allied reply to Germany's security pact proposal.

Boys' And Girls' Swine Clubs Have Created Greater Interest In Marketing Methods In Canada

The success of last year's efforts, through the medium of the Boys' and Girls' Swine Clubs, to interest the boys and girls of Western Canada in the breeding of better hogs than of hogs hitherto given, has resulted in this year's effort, in the opinion of officials of the Canadian National Railways agricultural department, in nearly every district also, where clubs were organized last year, the effect is now to be seen in the production program of a better class of hogs, due to the improvement in many instances of pure-bred barn type sows for community use.

Organizing of boys' and girls' clubs is reported from several points on the Canadian National line, in addition to those which last year had carried on the various exhibitions in the western provinces, and, as a result, it is anticipated that the contests for the right to represent the provinces at the Royal Show in Toronto this year will be even more keenly fought than those of the year 1924.

Every district among the young club, but also among the older people, is the effect of the swine club movement being achieved. In the case of two Manitoba clubs where swine clubs were organized in 1922, marketings of hogs increased from 25,325 in 1921 to 321,300 in 1924 at the first point, and from 21,250 in 1921 to 212,027 in 1924 at the second point of shipment. Apart from the increase in numbers, the most noticeable change has been in the quality of the hogs. Whereas the color and types were very mixed prior to the formation of the clubs, the shipments in 1924 were practically all one color and the hogs were of very such superior quality.

Clubs are organized under the joint direction of the Dominion and provincial departments of agriculture, with the following objects:

To stimulate greater interest in swine raising among boys and girls and to develop a more general knowledge of swine marketing methods in Canada.

To give boys and girls practical instruction in swine judging, so that they will have sufficient knowledge of the desirable market type to enable them to select breeding stock intelligently.

To develop the community principle of swine breeding.

To demonstrate the value of production in the home, and to encourage marketing in the best advantage.

To encourage a closer relationship between the producer and the consumer, and to bring about improved methods of feeding and management.

To give boys and girls a practical knowledge of the value of swine as a source of income, and to encourage them to secure ten or twenty-one hogs of age on September 1st of the current year.

The members must all have the name brand of pigs, which are the property of a pure-bred swine breeder.

All swine entered for competition, either at a local fair or in a regional show, must be owned and fed by a member of the club, and at least one member previous to date of the local exhibition.

The member must own two pigs and preferably three—one of which is to be retained for breeding purposes.

Boys of all ages are to be exhibited at the local boys' and girls' club fair, or at a fall agricultural fair, or in the absence of either, at a specially arranged swine show.

A club may also exhibit a variety of pigs in a central competition, which is held at a central point in the province.

Natural Resources Bulletin Canada's Forests Provide Work For Many Thousands

The natural resources intelligence service of the department of the interior at Ottawa says: In 1923 there were thirty-two thousand men working in the sawmill and pulp and paper mills in Canada. In this work they earned seventy-two million dollars. The mills and timber limits, with their equipment, represented an investment of nearly six hundred million dollars. This, coupled with justice, is termed big business. Canada has a variety of such large organizations, and they are the backbone of the manufacturing life of this country.

Think for a moment, however, that these large industries mean Canada's virgin natural resources are being developed. For forests are being utilized in building up Canadian industry and commerce, and this is as it should be. In providing work for these 32,000 men the forests were providing wages that enabled them to purchase the necessities and some of the luxuries of life. It is very important for the forests that made itself felt in providing work for the factory worker.

To provide work for the factory worker is not, however, the only work that the forest can do. The latter, also, is a consumer of foodstuffs, and the wages earned from forest development reached the farmer who produced the grain and wool supplies that the forest worker required. The farmer is thus interested in forest development.

To follow the student in the forest to its logical conclusion we would of necessity have to include every trade, every industry and every profession, and the workers therein, because none is exempt from a Canada's forest, direct or indirect, with Canada's forest development.

With a population so closely allied to forest interests, it would appear to the duty of every Canadian to see that the forests are protected from destruction by fire.

Epidemic Of Pairs Sweeping Germany

Cologne Stages Three Big Exhibitions Search of Foreign Business The epidemic of pairs which is sweeping over Europe has struck Cologne, which has just held its third exhibition in less than two years. Time was when German enterprise in fair was limited to the old-established fair at Leipzig, with Frankfurt as a second rate competitor. Now there are regular spring and autumn fairs in Leipzig, Frankfurt, Berlin, Koenigsberg, Bremen, Hamburg, Cologne and several other cities.

It is but natural that the Cologne fair has as its specialty an exhibition of everything connected with modern heating. The Ruhr Valley is the great coal and lignite basins of Germany, and many and diverse are the inventors and firms occupying themselves with the problem of rational heating. This year's fair abounded in heat-carrying apparatus, and the inventors and firms occupying themselves with the problem of rational heating.

The promoters of the fair say that this year's business was good. There were, however, no buyers from Holland, Holland and England and even some from France.

Italy's Prospects Are Bright

Country is Prosperous and People Healthy and Happy

Italy is now one of the most prosperous of European countries. She has neither steel for war nor coal and iron for industry, but she has a healthy, happy and prolific people.

Her population increased at the estimate by 2,500,000 from 1910 to 1921. The birth rate is 31.3; the death rate is 19.2. Italy is fertile, land, therefore, at the rate of more than 100,000 a year.

Canadian Banking System

Very Superior to U.S. In Spite of Recent Failures

There were 45 Canadian banks and 1,939 commercial bankruptcies in the United States in April. Probably most of the banks were small local concerns, but the depositors and shareholders do not suffer the loss that for that reason. With the Home Bank crash in mind, Canadians may not boast too loudly of the superiority of their banking system, but it has since been buttressed by a government audit system, and on the score of safety there is something to be said for institutions the size of the Canadian chartered banks.—Toronto Globe.

Heiland has Been Disarmed

Equipment Cost Germany $85,000,000 and 24 Years Work

Inhabitants of this little wind-swept island which has been converted from the status of a fortress and submarine base to that of a peaceful district of habitation, who formerly entertained only of summer visitors as a side line, have been wondering of late how the great change which has taken place here is going to affect their business. The outer entrance to the harbor has been completely blocked, as part of the scheme of disarmament, and no more tourists from the continent.

The work of demilitarization, carried out under the peace terms by the allied commission of control, is said to be the largest task of this kind ever attempted, and with the blocking of the harbor entrance against warships of all kinds the job has been brought to a conclusion. While this work was in progress great numbers of visitors arrived from spring until fall to witness the different phases of the demilitarization, but with the closing of the fortifications at an end, the great guns taken down and melted into peace-time implements, the island has lost the interest in this one-time island arsenal which the Germans took 24 years to equip at a cost of approximately $85,000,000.

Build Amphitheatre For Christ's Coming
Religious Order Raises $60,000 For Building In Australia

In order to wait for the second coming of Christ, 2,000 members of the Order of the Star in the East have been an ambitious plan. At Halmuir Beach, near Sydney, Australia, says the London Express correspondent. So deep is their belief that this return is imminent, preparations have been made at the cost of $60,000, raised by enrolling members of the order who subscribe from $50 to $500 per year.

While the order's belief in the Christ will return in human form, it is expected He will arrive at the amphitheatre by walking on the water from South Head, at the entrance to the harbor to Halmuir.

The amphitheatre will contain a small model of a Greek theatre which will be used for the staging of Greek drama during the waiting period, as even the most ardent member of the order will not say just when the second coming is to take place.

War Correspondent Is Dead

Leut. Col. Reginald, Famous Journalist, Dies Suddenly

The death of Leut. Col. Charles Reginald, famous war correspondent, who he succumbed to an attack of apoplexy, removed from the fields both of journalism and of war.

He will be remembered particularly for his work as military expert for the London Times and the London Morning Post during the war with Germany, and for the part he took in revealing the shortage of munitions on the western front in the early part of the war, and the failure of the various recruiting schemes subsequently. He was born in 1858.

Jazz Inevitable Jerusalem

Wireless On Mount of Olives Supplies London Concert

Jazz has invaded Jerusalem. During the visit of Lord Hailford to Palestine in connection with the opening of the Hebrew University, members of the Balfour party heard concert slightly as they were broadcast by the London radio station.

A British wireless fan fitted up an aerial on the Mount of Olives, especially for the Balfour visitors, from which a line was extended to the government house occupied by English officials which enabled them to enjoy the London programme, part of which always consists of jazz as played for dancing by the Savoy orchestra.

Japanese Faith

Japan has its shortcomings, just as every other nation has, but it never yet has failed to live up to its promises to the agreements it has made with this country. Its record is a record of faith.

British Firms Get Contract

Combined Resources to Complete With German Syndicate's Figures

An important contract involving $200,000 has been awarded to the German by two British metal firms. The contract is for the supply of oil well casing to the Anglo-Persian Oil Co. A German syndicate quoted figures 30 per cent lower than the British companies tendering separately, whereupon the Anglo-Persian Oil Co. invited the British firms, as a result of which the latter agreed to combine their resources. They were then able to compete with the figures of the German syndicate, and were awarded the contract.

New Difficulty For Burglar

Safe Screams When Touched By Unauthorised Hand

Mr. R. C. Whittingham, a young inventor from West Bromwich, has just brought out a new device which will add to the difficulties of the burglar. It is nothing less than a safe which screams as soon as it is touched by an unauthorized hand, and goes on screaming for four hours or until someone who knows how to stop it comes along.

The scream is set in motion by delicate and secret mechanism connected with a vigorous motor-booster, and is loud enough to arouse the entire neighborhood within a radius of a quarter of a mile or more.

Looks Were Deceiving

"What's the fare?" inquired the woman of the taxi-driver, as the conveyance stopped at her door here.

"Two dollars, ma'am," was the prompt reply.

"Well, here's a dollar and a half, ma'am—I'm not such a fool as I look."

"No," said the driver. "I wish you were, ma'am."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

JUNE 11

THE CHURCH IN ANTIOCH

Golden Text: The disciples were called Christians first in Antioch. Acts 11:26.

Lesson: Acts 11:19-30.

Devotional Reading: Isaiah 12.

The Text Explained and Illuminated

Good Out of Evil, verse 19:21. Luke once looks backward in his narrative. Recalling the trouble that arose after the stoning of Stephen, he tells us that it resulted in his disciples being scattered abroad. "The persecution turned out to be a salutary agency unexpectantly organized by the force of the new faith" (Dr. Lyon H. Hough). The persecuted disciples fled to Phoenicia and the island of Cyprus and Antioch in Syria, and everywhere they preached to the Jews and won new converts. "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church."

Some of the disciples who went to Antioch were Greek-speaking Jews, natives of Cyprus and Cilicia, whose residence among Gentiles and made them more liberal than were the Hebrew-speaking Jews of Palestine. These humble and unvarnished disciples took a great forward step in the history of the Church—they preached to the Gentiles, and won converts, telling them about the Lord Jesus.

A Dangerous Shipment

New York Zoo Receives Assortment of Poisonous Snakes

The worst assortment of poisonous devilry yet to arrive in this country has been taken aboard from a Brooklyn dock through New York streets to the Bronx Zoo in trucks and with armed guards.

Among the vipers, with ugly, ugly heads as broad as a man's hand; four boomslangs, nine feet long, slender as wispens, and as quick as lightning; cobras, thirty feet long, which spit venom; and eighteen green mambas, the deadliest and most vicious reptiles in the world, were included in the consignment. They were caught in Africa by J. L. Bock, of Trenton, N.J.

The zoo four keepers who transferred the snakes wore glasses to safeguard their eyes from the streams of poison the big cobras ejected.

One of them had a narrow escape when a grand cobra shot its venom fifteen feet, missing the keeper by a foot.

Says Radio Caused Loss Of Dirigible

Professor in Tokio University Investigated Disaster Of 883

Dr. T. Terada, science professor in Tokio university, says that the question of the dirigible 883 last March was the loss of her crew, was caused by a broadcast radio wave.

Terada was a member of the board appointed to investigate the explosion, and after it had ended its labors without finding a theory, he continued his experiments. Counting a miniature of the airship with the aluminum paint that was used on the 883, he found that radio waves directed against the hull of her crew, caused nearly an inch, and while he has not fully disclosed the nature of the experiment, he has not yet announced his conviction that he has found the cause of the disaster.

Firms Increasing Number Employed

Statistics Show Expansion Much Larger Than Reported Last Year

Further and pronounced improvement in the employment statistics, says the bureau of statistics, was indicated on May 1, when 5,225 firms reported that they had increased their working forces by 31,535 persons. Counting a miniature of the airship with the aluminum paint that was used on the 883, he found that radio waves directed against the hull of her crew, caused nearly an inch, and while he has not fully disclosed the nature of the experiment, he has not yet announced his conviction that he has found the cause of the disaster.

Act Of Courtesy Gains A Legacy

Old Lady Did Not Forget Kindness Of Conductor

Conductor 915 of the Capital Traction Company, Washington, D.C., known to his family and a few friends as James Gray, left his car several years ago and went to the city to escort an old lady aboard, and when she got off he helped her to the curb again. Recently he received a letter from Miss Annie Ward, of Cincinnati, saying that her mother, Mrs. Mary Ward, had died and left him $4,000 because of his courtesy.

"I was so glad to hear of it, as usual that she never forgot."

Dookhbor Pupils

Again In Revolt

Insist On Being Allowed To Sing Russian Hymns

Dookhbor children attending the Columbia school in Grand Forks, N.D., have refused to repeat the Lord's Prayer as requested each day by the teachers on the ground that the curriculum should include only the three V's, and the singing of Russian hymns.

A delegation of Dookhbor mothers backed up the action of the children and insisted the school to press their claim for singing of the hymns, none of which school officials said were in the curriculum.

The Dookhbor recently refused to send their children to provincial school, but after the court had served a writ, they promised to send all the children and fill the schools to overflowing.

German Soldiers Try Of Military Routine

Get Despondent Before Twelve-Year Enlistment Is Ended

There were 160 suicides in the German army a year during 1922 and 1924, the authorities, investigating causes, by the blame largely to the long period of enlistment, 12 years, prescribed by the Treaty of Versailles.

Those who get despondent are discharged after four or five years, it is pointed out, when they are not made non-commissioned officers. Naturally the number of such suicides is limited.

Those who are not selected are discharged after only eight more years of army life.

On the other hand, men who serve out the full 12 years are given preference in the allotment of civil service positions, which means that they and practically taken care of for life.

Hubbard—No, dear—we can't go to Brighton—we must think of all the bills we owe.

Wife—But we can't think of them down there, dear!

The Handbooks Again

The Dominion Government will make another attempt to deal with the handbook problem. The measure will probably encounter the usual opposition, not only from interested persons, but from those who object to this kind of legislation as interfering with the pleasures of the people. Unless losing money to producers of the worst kind is regarded as a pleasure, the latter objection has no weight.—Toronto Globe.

Says That Need Exists For A Radical Change

Ellis Root says that a need exists for an immediate and radical change in American criminal jurisprudence. In American criminal jurisprudence, Chief Justice Taft has been quoted as saying that the administration of the criminal law was a national disgrace. A committee of the American Bar Association has said much the same thing. Let's see. What was that it said? That the law was a disgrace. Something to the effect that everybody talked about it, but nobody did anything.—Boston Transcript.

CAPTAIN BLOOD
by RAFAEL SABATINI

Copyright, 1912, by Rafael Sabatini.
"CAPTAIN BLOOD," a Viagraph picture with V. Warner Kerrick in the title role, is an adaptation of the thrilling novel.

Blood would not stir out of Port Royal again that same night. But that hoard Blahop had passed the word, and the fore kept a sharp lookout. In the time that it took a fortnight, Blood babbled him. He sent me and most of the men off in a frigate that I bought for the voyage. His name—as he'd secretly told me—was to follow and give chase. Whether or not the game he played or not I can't tell; but he was to be alive as I'd expected he would be.

Having delivered himself of his dejection of fact and falsehood, and thereby added one more reason to the plots of Peter Blood, he enquired where the Captain might be found. Being informed that he was at the Wolverstone, he stepped into a boat and went aboard, to report himself, as he put it.

In the great cabin of the Arabella he found Peter Blood alone and very far gone in drink—a condition in which he must have been some time to have been seen. As Wolterstone came in, the Captain raised his head to consider him. A moment they stared in his gaze as he brought his visitor into focus. Then he laughed, a loose, idiotic laugh, that no one else was half a second.

"My God, Peter, what's this?"
"Run," said Peter. "Run, from Jamaica."

"The asking you what this?" he bawled.

"Run," said Captain Blood, again, and then he turned away, as if he were answering some question. Why don't you answer mine?"

"You done it," said Wolterstone. "Thank God, I had the sense to hold your tongue till I came. Are ye sober enough to understand me?"

"Drink or sober, mine 'Merican?"

"Then listen." And out came the tale that Wolterstone told him. The Captain listened while he grasped it.

"I'll do as well as I can," said he, when Wolterstone had finished.

"Ye're mad," Wolterstone growled. "We'll talk again tomorrow."

"They did; but little purpose, except that day or on any other day thereafter while the rains—which set in that night—endured. When the shrewd Wolterstone discovered that run was not what all Blood. There was a cancer eating at his heart, and the Old Wolf knew enough to make a shrewd guess of his nature. He cured all things that dangled petticoats, and, knowing his world, waited for the sickness to pass.

But it did not pass. When Blood was not doing or drinking in the tavern of Port Royal, leaving company that in his earlier days he had both, he was shut up in his cabin aboard the Arabella, alone and uncommunicative. His friends, at Governor's House, bewailed at this change in him, sought to reclaim him. Made-moelle d'Ogden, particularly distressed, sent him almost daily invitations, to few of which he responded.

Sometimes Blood asked himself why he had come to Port Royal, and why he was degenerating with the blood of the eyes of all. He showed a black beard to grow on cheeks that had ever been so carefully shaved; and the long thick black hair, once so sedulously curled, hung now in a lank, uncombed mass over his forehead. He held the clue to this degeneration, ventured out to hear him frankly about it.

"I have been thinking of late," said Blood, "that I am not alone. Let me present to you, sir, my companions: Captain Hagthorpe, of the Ellabehn, Captain Wolterstone, of the Kithley, and Captain Yerville of the Lachet."

The Baron stared and laughed. "At Captain Blood," his manner implied plainly that he despised them, and that he despised them at once to understand it. It had a curious effect upon Captain Blood. It awoke the devil in him, and it awoke, at the same time, his self-respect, which of late had been slumbering. A sudden shame of his disordered, ill-kept appearance came over him, and he made the most of it.

force him on his arrival. What I have come to propose to you, my captain, at the suggestion of our good friend, M. d'Ogden, is, in brief, that you enroll your ships and your forces under M. de Rivaroli's flag."

"You are offering to take us into the French service?" he asked. "What terms, Monsieur?"

"With the rank of Capitaine de Valence for yourself and similar rank for the officers serving under you. You will enjoy the pay of that rank, and you will be entitled, together with your men, to one-fourth share in all prizes taken."

"I will consult my officers," said Blood. They came and the matter was laid before them by M. de Cussy himself. Thereafter, the young French filibuster, had the honor to point out to M. de Cussy that the share offered was too small. For one-fifth of the prizes, the officers would answer for their men; for one-fourth, they would not. This M. de Cussy finally conceded, and the articles were drawn up and signed that very day. The hussars were to be at Petit Gou by the end of January, when M. de Rivaroli had announced that he might be expected.

CHAPTER XXII.
M. de Rivaroli

Captain Blood was in a disgruntled mood when he received from Torque and still in that mood when he came to his meetings in the bay of Petit Gou. In that same mood he greeted M. de Rivaroli when he came to his meetings with his fleet of five men-of-war at last dropped anchor alongside the harbor.

Summoned to wait on him, Captain Blood repaired to the Castle of Petit Gou, where the interview was to take place. He was not alone. He was faced man of force, very cold and distant of manner, merely Captain Blood, and he was not alone. He was faced man of force, very cold and distant of manner, merely Captain Blood, and he was not alone.

"A moment, M. de Cussy. I do not know you," said Blood. "I am not alone. Let me present to you, sir, my companions: Captain Hagthorpe, of the Ellabehn, Captain Wolterstone, of the Kithley, and Captain Yerville of the Lachet."

Egypt's Governor Well Chosen

Sir George Lloyd Understands People and Has Perfect Knowledge of Arabia

No better man could have been selected to succeed Field Marshal Viscount Alibony as British high commissioner for Egypt and for the Sudan than the Right Hon. Sir George Lloyd, the former governor of Bombay. He has left an enduring memorial in India in the form of the great barrage over the Indus at Sukkur, which is known as the Lloyd Dam.

Among Sir George Lloyd's qualifications for the post of British high commissioner for Egypt and the Sudan, with headquarters at Cairo and salary and allowances amounting to $100,000, are his perfect mastery of Arabic and his knowledge of everything in connection with Islam, especially in relation to its political problems. It was because of his remarkable understanding of all these matters that Lord Kitchener appointed him early in the Great War to assist him in organizing the Intelligence Service in the Near East.

A Wonderland for Children at Wembley

Vicount Jellicoe, former Admiral of the British Navy during the Great War, shaking hands with Sir George McLaren Brown, European General Manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, at the miniature Banff Station and seated on the miniature C.P.R. train which takes travellers around Treasure Island. Viscount Jellicoe is remarking: "This is but one of the great things the Canadian Pacific Railway is doing and I am sure that the Canadian Pacific train are going to prove in conjunction with the wonders of Treasure Island one of the drawing cards of the (Wembley) Exhibition." The engine which draws this train is a replica of engine No. 2200. The island is interested most of all to develop children who obtain views of a sandy beach on which Robinson Crusoe and Man Friday support themselves. There, too, the children dig in the sands to their hearts' content and there are caves and Noah's Ark with chains of moving animals; pirates and seven-leaved century ships, characters out of fiction such as Fen and Wendy, Long John Silver and Jim Hawkins, Tweedledum and Tweedledee. The train passes through the Cannagat tunnel and winds in and out of the Canadian Rockies through the Great Divide. There are realistic scenes of Banff and Lake Louise and a park of wild animals while from the sands the children climb by pony tracks to the summits of many famous peaks in the Canadian Pacific Rockies.

Farm Training for British Boys

In place of utilizing the school of agriculture at Vermillion for the training of British farm boys this fall and winter, the Verdon school will be opened on the same basis as the other two schools in operation, and the British boys who come out for training will be distributed according to convenience among the three schools. This will mean that any young men coming from Britain or elsewhere to settle in Alberta and who wish to take course offered in the agriculture schools will be able to do so on the same basis as any boy or girl in Alberta. The schools are open to any who wish to make application for the free courses offered. The Provincial Government is asking the Overseas Settlement Board to make a contribution towards the cost of educating the boys who come from overseas, but at any rate the schools are open to all who wish to make application.

Here and There

It is expected that the present year will break all records in the movement of Eastern transatlantic travellers. It is estimated that over a quarter of a million Americans and Canadians will travel to Europe during the season.

The supply of farm hands for Western farms is not equal to the demand and the shortage is becoming more pronounced as the season progresses, in spite of the large number of immigrants coming from Europe for this purpose.

During the eight months ending March 1925, 187,798 cars of grain were passed by the government inspectors for the western provinces. This number has only been exceeded four times in the past twenty-four years. Of the total for the year 1924-25, 1,055,555 were on Canadian Pacific lines.

According to a statement issued by the Bureau of Statistics, Canada's production of commercial fruits for the past year showed a decrease of $8,002,912 in value as compared with 1923. The total value of fruit grown in 1923 was $33,169,343 and in 1924, $24,366,431.

There has been a decided increase in the first quarter of this year in the ordinary life insurance written in Canada as compared with that of the corresponding period in 1924. The increase in March over February was from twenty-eight to thirty-five million dollars.
